The first twenty election districts out of the 891 in Manhattan and the Bronx indicated a plurality for McClellan on this side of the river of 36,000, and the Brooklyn showing from forty election districts gave indications that McClellan would cut Low's plurality in that borough to 5,000. Every district thus far reporting showed McClellan gains.

DEVERY'S VOTE SMALL.

The Devery vote was surprisingly small. In many districts in Brooklyn he did not get a single vote in the early returns. In Manhattan and the Bronx he averaged from 1 1-2 to 2 votes to an election district.

How weak Devery was came to light in the first returns from his own Assembly District, the Ninth. The Seventh Election District of the Ninth Assembly District gave McClellan 167, Low 116 and Devery 11.

Returns on the contest between Grout and Hinrichs were confusing. but in general the advance figures indicated that Grout was getting about two votes to the Fusion candidate's one. Grout ran ahead of McClellan in this borough on the early returns, being especially strong in Republican districts.

The figures showed that Fornes was running along with Grout, getting about two votes to McGuire's one, and that in Republican districts he was wiping the earth with the Fusion man. As the figures grew the possibilities of a landslide became more apparent. Two hours after the close of the polls defeat was practically conceded at Fusion headquarters. SWANSTROM IS BEATEN.

An amazing feature of the campaign, utterly beyond the understanding of the political leaders of Brooklyn, is the remarkable showing made by Martin Littleton, Hugh McLaughlin's candidate for Borough President. The early returns indicated that he would beat Mr. Swanstrom, the Fusion candidate, by an immense majority.

Claim 80,000 for Herrick.

COLUMBUS, O.. Nov. 3.—At Republican State headquarters it is insisted that the vote will be about 990,000, and that Herrick's plurality will be in excess of 100,000, with a majority on joint ballot in the Legislature of sixty for the Republicans. Bets are posted all over the State that Col. Herrick's plurality will be 80,000, with no takers. Republicans are counting upon a heavy "slump" in the Democratic vote in the rural districts on account of Johnson's advocacy of the single tax.

There was enough left of him to appear at Police Headquarters and recite his wocs to Inspector Cortright. As the Inspector could find no other mark under the ketchup than a scratch on the nose, he advised Mr. Goldberger to forget it. Inspector Brooks saw the man later and gave orders to Inspector Schmitt-berger to see that he was allowed to get out the vote "under the pump" without molestation.

to have been the victim of a pre-arranged attack by a gang of election repeaters on the Bowery to-day. He was kicked, stabbed and beaten by a crowd of men who wore badges and who ran away after they had pummelled him into a state of unconsciousness.

Cohen had been on duty with Inspector Brooks at Police Headquarters during the night and left at 5 A. M. to go to his home, No. 142 East Eighty-first street. He intended voting and then returning to Headquarters. Cohen and Inspector Brooks have been active in the work of locating repeaters and are both well known to the gangs that have been imported for the purpose of swelling the votes to-day.

As the car on which he was going home reached Third avenue and Ninth nan continued to sputter. His face drew street Cohen saw a crowd of seven or itself up in a bunch. "He is laughing at us," called out the excited Inspector. "Here, officer," he added, turning to a policeman, "arrest this man. He's a floater and doesn't know his own name."

With the prisoner still sputtering "Ha-Ha-Ha" the policeman took Hardcastle to Centre Street Court and there Magistrate Cornell began to question him. All he could get from him was "Ha-Ha-Ha-cas-cas,"

The Magistrate looked worried. "He doesn't know his name, eh?" he asked. Then a broad light broke over the Magistrate's countenance. "I have it," he said. "The man stutters."

Hardcastle smiled and sputtered into silence.

Then they scattered. He was taken to the hospital and several stitches were sewn in his head and cheek. When he had somewhat recovered Cohen said that neariy all the men in the crowd that attacked him had worn badges of some sort. He thought they were political badges, and that the men were repeaters who knew him, and who wished to get him out of the way before the voting began.

Never in the history of New York elections was there such a remarkable rush to the polls in the early hours of the morning as there was to-

"IDEAL FOR FUSION"-MAYOR LOW.

Mayor Low voted at 8.10 o'clock in the polling booth at the southeast corner of Sixty-fourth street and Park avenue. He was the fifty-seventh voter in the precinct.

The Mayor left his home, at Sixty-fourth street and Madison avenue, promptly at 8 o'clock. He was unaccompanied. The fine weather seemed to please him greatly, and he sauntered leisurely to the polling booth. The election officials received him cordially, and he shook hands all around before taking his ballot and entering the booth. The Mayor spent only a minute in the booth. He was all smiles when he came out, and after leaving the polling place he good-naturedly posed for a group of photographers "I am delighted with the weather," he said. "It certainly means a heavy vote will be cast. It is ideal weather for the fusion ticket."

M'CLELLAN VOTES IN FIFTEEN SECONDS. George B. McClellan, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, cast his vote at Forty-third street and Madison avenue, which is the Twenty-second Election of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District, at 9.54 A. M. Col. McClellan walked from the Murray Hill Hotel and was not delayed in casting his vote, as there were very few persons in the polling place waiting in line.

His vote was No. 127 and he took just fifteen seconds to cast it. Col. McClellan refused to say anything about the situation and boarded a Madison avenue car going down town.

Just before Mr. McClellan voted, Deputy Police Commissioner Gherardi Davis arrived at the polling place in an automobile. He went inside and looked around without saying anything and and then went away. He said he was simply on a tour of inspection.

Charles F. Murphy cast his vote at 9.50 o'clock in the polling place at First avenue and Seventeenth street. He did not awaken until 9 o'clock, and after a hasty breakfast walked down to the polling place. There was a big crowd awaiting him and he was greeted with cheer as he made his appearance. He voted ballot No. 236.

R. Fulton Cutting, President of the Citizens' Union, voted at 8.30 o'clock n the Fourteenth Election District of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District. He spent three minutes in the booth, more time than had been consumed by most of the voters who preceded him. The number of his ballot was 58.

JEROME VOTED FOR LOW, O. K.

District-Attorney Jerome arrived in the city on the 11.30 train from Lakeville, Conn., and went directly to his home, No. 8 Rutgers street, where he was joined by Assistant District-Attorneys Lord and Joseph E.

Corrigan and his secretary, Alfred Hodder. The three proceeded to the voting place at No. 112 Henry street, where they had to wait a few minutes, as there was a long line of voters there.

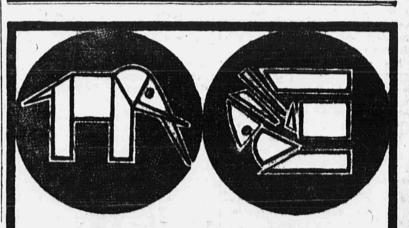

District-Attorney Jerome took about one minute to cast his vote. His was No. 293. Mr. Lord's was No 295 and Mr. Corrigan cast the 296th ballot Secretary Hodder cast the 292d vote.

The District-Attorney was asked how he had voted. He said: "I put a cross under the emblem of the Citizens' Union."

J. PIERPONT MORGAN VOTES EARLY. Morgan entered the polling place at No. 638 Sixth avenue early to-day and cast the two hundred and tenth vote in the Fourteenth Election District of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District. Mr. Morgan took about half a minute to cast his vote and he then huried into his carriage that was waiting outside for him.

Among other prominent men that cast their votes in the same polling place during the morning was Corporation Counsel George L. Rives and Andrew H. Green, "The Father of Greater New York."
